"MUSIC" ON THE THAMES.

At a meeting of the Thames Conservancy Board, some amusement was caused during | Paris, equal to that of any of the principal the consideration of an application by a correspondent for permission to play a violin at Shiplake and Hambleden locks. Lord Desborough, the Chairman, remarked that the request was a modest one, but another complexion was put on the affair by the report from the Chief Inspector, who wrote that he " was unable to recommend that the permission should not be, granted. The worst of it was that the man was unable to play. He certainly aucceeded in producing sounds from the instrument which did not enhance the pleasure of people passing through the lock, but there might be some advantage in the fact that it prevented persons from assembling to watch the traffic passing through." Sir R. Melvill Beachcroft : I move the permission be granted provided' he does not play the violin (laughter).
The Board ultimately resolved to grant the musician's request.

It is hoped to raise sufficient to maintain for one year Alice Maud Bishop, a little crippled girl who has looked poverty in the face all her life. (A hint for our local Y.M.C.A.)

An Anglophobe journal, the "Rheinisch-Westfaelische Zeitung," recently published a circumstantial account of an imaginary attempt made by him to escape from the fortress, whereupon Lieut: Brandon brought an action for libel, which he has won.
